Cousin, when the spring shall fall..... 232
Cool shades and dews are round my way..... 248
Come violet, thou lingering one..... 305
Come in, little stranger..... 400
Deep hidden in the forest wild..... 81
Denied the greater bliss to look..... 120
Dear ladies, hear our sad complaint..... 346
Faintly the dim sun shines through fleecy clouds 80
Fair being ! the spring is around thy way..... 139
False though she be to me and love..... 160
Fire ! fire ! What's the matter ?..... 232
Fair maiden, glad as fair, thus moving free.... 249
Forbear, sweet girl ; your scheme forego..... 384
Go not yet, oh, go not yet..... 128
Give me, when daylight sets..... 152
Good-morrow to thee, wild wood brook..... 178
Gently, gently, strike the lyre..... 215
Glide gaily forth, my gallant barque..... 272
Gentle, constant, mild and brave..... 287
He liveth well who loveth well..... 56
How sweet our native hills appear..... 80
How different from Louisa's tongue..... 128
How sweet to rest in calm repose..... 136
How sad and forsaken..... 195
How much of all that's beautiful..... 197
High streamed the tapering flame..... 330
I was amid a throng..... 4
I've sat enchained by beauty's spell..... 8
I stood beneath the ruined arches eyeing..... 25
I cannot bear neglect, it turns my very heart.. 57
I had a dream, which was not all a dream..... 82
I never look'd upon thy face..... 95
I am, perhaps, as you will say..... 104
In hunting, and in love and war..... 128
I dream'd that buried in my fellow-clay..... 136
I knew by the smoke which so gracefully curled 139
I've roved through many a weary round..... 160
I thank you for that downcast look..... 200
I said our friendship would be broken yet..... 201
I don't care three and sixpence now..... 211
I'll struggle to forgive thee, it may be to forget 238
I had a friend when youth was green..... 264
It happened once that a straggling ray..... 289
I saw thee in thy hour of pride..... 291
I'd be a parody made by a ninny..... 299
I have an ash-silk quaker dress..... 336
If ever you should come to Modena..... 339
I do dislike the married life..... 350
I broke the spell that held me long..... 352
I never said thy smile, dear girl..... 367
I feel no more the light that shed..... 393
I think of thee when the morning breaks..... 393
Know'st thou the land of dreams ?..... 115
Let me love you, though your doom..... 152
Look—do not speak a word at first..... 216
Lord Harry has written a novel..... 283
Let puling poets vaunt their flame..... 283
Long hast thou slept unnoted. Nature stole.. 386
My lonely bird, a charm thy presence brings.. 6
My child, with sad though sweet delight..... 37
Man ! mortal man ! to guileful error prone.... 56
Maid of the lyre..... 80
Methinks I view thee, ruthless banqueter..... 80
My bright one ! thou art moving through..... 250
Mourn not, sweet maids, nor fondly try..... 256
My kite ! my kite ! I've lost my kite..... 259
My cap ! my well-worn leather cap !..... 393
Now is the hour..... 104
No, not the lighest tone was heard..... 232
Nay, ask me not for cheerful rhymes..... 252
Oh, yes, he is in parliament..... 31
Oh thou, dear lady, may thy bloom..... 68
Oh ! time is like a river gliding..... 88
Once, love, among the roses..... 128
Oh, wouldst thou say that every thought of me 139
Oh, what bosoms but must yield..... 160
Oh, time and death, with certain pace..... 206
Oh, Laura, will nothing I bring thee..... 231
O'er the blue sea night spreads her mantle wide 232
O'er the clear quiet waters..... 232
Oh ! why didst thou die ?..... 243
O'er a lonely heath a horseman sped..... 281
Oh, name him not, unless it be..... 338
Oh, haste, and patronize "the fair"..... 347
Oh ! if love's burning spirit..... 303
Poets may rave about their groves..... 147
Poor little sprite ! in what dark narrow cell.... 169
Prude, cold and cruel, tell me why..... 197
Rise, sons of France, with ardour glowing..... 299
She on whom fortune once hath smiled..... 25
Sweet Fanny Kemble !..... 87
Sam Patch is done, his thread is spun..... 94
See in early spring appearing..... 128
Stranger, there is bending o'er thee..... 174
She holds the letter in her eager hands..... 222
"Sweet Ellen More," said I, "come forth"..... 291
Sweet is the hour when nature's self at rest... 328
She slumbered in the rocking chair..... 368
Stay ! stay ! thou bright, departing sun..... 376
Thy shadow darkens round us..... 6
Till now I knew not death was terrible..... 12
There is a ray whose sunny glow..... 38
There is a fiend that follows me..... 43
Thou silent solace of the lonely hour..... 46
The blithe lark springeth to the morning cloud 48
The foot may turn away..... 48
There is, in the lone, lone sea..... 48
There is no sound upon the night..... 51
Thou wak'st my baby boy from sleep..... 80
The poet may praise his evergreen bays..... 80
Thou'rt welcome to my heart..... 81
'Tis dull to sit from nine till six o'clock..... 91
Triumphant on a peak of Darien..... 100
That man a tailor born, I deem..... 120
Twilight slept upon Eden. The bright flowers 121
The muses once with garlands..... 128
There was a man..... 128
Thou hast gone to thy final rest..... 139
The flower of the meadow..... 139
They tell me she's no longer fair..... 147
Thou comest not in sober guise..... 153
The love that won thee did not speak..... 168
'Twas morn—but not the ray which falls..... 160
The sun had set..... 192
To meet again ! oh, what cruel fate..... 194
Thou smil'dst—a purer light..... 197
Twice, dear patrons, has tuneful Miss Affable 216
Thy lover's inconstant..... 232
There are but few, I deem, who have not felt.. 238
The butterfly that wastes its May..... 238
Those glorious days to come..... 238
There's not a flower of radiant hue..... 243
The moment must come when the hands..... 249
The mind of true piety shrinks not like snow.. 252
The moon has passed her midnight bourn..... 252
The scourge of lawless tyranny had swept.... 272
The scene was truly touching, such as might.. 276
They're stepping off, the friends I knew..... 283
The world has won thee—go thy way..... 297
'Tis sweet, in the green spring..... 320
To church I went with good intent..... 320
There was a little village boy..... 354
Time paused one day as he went his rounds... 367
The clock has chimed the midnight hour..... 376
Take off, my love, that vest of show..... 376
The age of chivalry has past..... 384
Though since I left my native soil..... 390
Upon the loftiest twig of the tall trees..... 49
Upon yon casement, happy thing..... 208
Upon the mountain's distant head..... 344
What soothes the hour of anxious care..... 32
Why so pale and wan, fond lover ?..... 63
While this fair page before me open lies..... 64
What are you, lady ?—nought is here... 70
Why do I mourn thee ? thou'rt now at rest... 95
Wake ! lady, from thy balmy sleep..... 128
Wherefore this solid silence, this deep gloom.. 129
When the last trumpet soundeth..... 136
When Peggy's dog her arms emprison..... 136
When evening o'er the silent hills..... 139
What is love ? a fire, fed with idle breath..... 152
When love sincere the bosom knows..... 254
When you mournfully rivet your tear-laden eye 29
With the nerves of a Samson..... 30
Why love in a cottage, my dear..... 338
Within these wooden walls confined..... 344
Whate'er the grief that dims my eye..... 360
What maiden is this with the bright laughing eye 399
Where are ye now, ye summer days..... 400
Ye're my ain luve !—ye're my ain..... 96
You have heard that I'm to be married..... 291
